

InflaRx Announces Leadership Team Additions with New CFO and Newly Created Position of Chief Strategy Officer

- Thomas Taapken, Ph.D. appointed Chief Financial Officer
- Jordan Zwick promoted to Chief Strategy Officer

Jena, Germany, 17 September 2020 – InflaRx (Nasdaq: IFRX), a clinical-stage biopharmaceutical company developing anti-inflammatory therapeutics by targeting the complement system, today announced two management appointments. Effective October 1, 2020, Thomas Taapken, Ph.D. will join InflaRx as Chief Financial Officer. Jordan Zwick has been promoted to Chief Strategy Officer, effective immediately.

Prof. Niels C. Riedemann, Chief Executive Officer and Founder of InflaRx, said: “I am delighted to welcome Thomas to InflaRx. He brings extensive senior management expertise in the public biopharmaceutical sector, including at companies with marketed products, and is an ideal fit as we advance our late-stage clinical development programs. Thomas has proven great leadership capabilities and is an excellent addition to our C-suite. I am also very pleased that Jordan has agreed to take on the newly created role of Chief Strategy Officer at the Company. Jordan has extensive experience in the U.S. biotech and pharma industry and strategic development and has a great network. He has been instrumental for various important developments in the Company and will foster our U.S. strategic footprint.”

Prof. Riedemann continued: “I would further like to take this opportunity to thank our outgoing CFO, Arnd Christ, for his contributions to InflaRx and the great team spirit and hard work he has provided throughout his 5 years in the Company. We all wish him the very best for his future endeavors.”

Thomas Taapken, Ph.D., said: “I am thrilled to join InflaRx as Chief Financial Officer at a very exciting time as the Company starts its first Phase III trial. InflaRx has made breakthrough discoveries in the area of anti-C5a therapeutics. Their work is significantly contributing to finding cures for several chronic inflammatory diseases, as well as life-threatening diseases such as COVID-19-induced pneumonia. I believe that IFX-1 has great potential, and, based on the data available, I am convinced we will be able to develop a drug for patients with serious inflammatory diseases and high unmet medical needs. I am truly impressed with the team and the great work they are doing and look forward to helping to move InflaRx into the next stage in its development.”

Thomas Taapken, Ph.D. has over 25 years of experience in the life sciences sector at senior management and board levels. Prior to joining InflaRx, he was Executive Chairman at Imcyse SA in Belgium, where he now serves as Chairman of the Board. He previously held executive management positions as Chief Financial Officer and Chief Executive Officer at several publicly listed and private companies, including Medigene AG, Epigenomics AG and Biotie Therapies (sold to Acorda Therapeutics in 2016). In addition to Imcyse, Thomas has also served on the board of private and public companies such as Scibase AB and Immunic Inc. He has successfully completed public and private financings, business and M&A transactions and worked in venture capital in both Germany and the U.S. He holds a Ph.D. in organic chemistry from the Technical University of Berlin and studied economics and physics at the University of Göttingen.

Jordan Zwick has served as head of business development and corporate strategy. With today's announcement, he will assume additional direct leadership responsibilities in the U.S. operations and finance organization. He has over a decade of finance, marketing and corporate development experience. As part of the healthcare marketing team at Medtronic, he launched a cardiac remote monitoring device in the acute care setting. Jordan next joined the business development team at Salix Pharmaceuticals, working on a wide range of transactions, including the $14.5B acquisition of Salix by Valeant Pharmaceuticals (now Bausch Health Companies) in 2015. Post-acquisition, he became Head of Strategy for the Salix business segment, where he played a key role in the turnaround story of Bausch Health. Jordan holds an Honors B.A. and an M.S. in economics from Florida Atlantic University and an MBA from the University of San Francisco.
